This is Tokyo, once a great metropolis risen from the ashes of the Second World War. Tonight Tokyo once again smolders, ruined by a force almost beyond human imagination. Tonight the world seeks answers, but the people of this devastated city now seek only refuge from a waking nightmare. Eight million souls began this day here, but no one knows how many survive. And the nightmare continues, shattering buildings of concrete and steel, raining fire and death upon anything in its path. This terror lives. It surpasses anything that this planet has ever known. It does so without pity, without any sense of -- I think it sees us.
